“Our Legacy To Our Children” by PGM Stephen M. Munsinger, 33<sup>o</sup> Sovereign Grand Inspector General in Colorado

More than fifty years ago a group of Scottish Rite Masons in Denver created the Scottish Rite Foundation of Colorado. While these Masons are no longer with us, they have the great distinction of leaving a priceless legacy. This legacy is a vitalizing element in Scottish Rite Freemasonry today.

At the time of the Foundation's creation, the injunction was that the Scottish Rite was going to do something for the children of Colorado by an endowment for speech therapy. Insuring the ability to help future generations of children overcome speech and language disorders continues as our never-ending mission of service. This is our legacy to our children.

Part of the enabling process for this legacy is to strengthen the bond with our senior clinic partner, The Children's Hospital in Denver. In 2003 we established an endowed chair at Children's – an act which has made a profound difference for the Foundation and its work.

In 2006 we are taking another significant action through a fundraising campaign to support the new speech clinic which will be located in The Children's Hospital now under construction at Fitzsimons. We will make a $150,000 capital construction gift to The Children's Hospital for the group therapy room in the new hospital.

This gift mirrors a similar one made by the Foundation in 1953 for the first group therapy room at Children's but with two differences. The amount of the current planned gift is much larger and it is being made not only in the name of the Foundation but also on behalf of all Colorado Masons. The room will be named “Colorado Masons – Scottish Rite Foundation Group Therapy Room,” making a significant statement for all of Freemasonry.

Through all our efforts in helping children with language disorders, our forefathers' legacy continues under our stewardship – providing care for today's children; giving hope for tomorrow's.

Reasons for Establishing the “Colorado Masons – Scottish Rite Foundation Group Therapy Room”

Children with speech and language disorders receive therapy either individually or in groups. Group therapy, when appropriate, provides an opportunity for several children to work with speech pathologists in a group setting, thereby maximizing social, learning, and communication interaction.

Group therapy has long been an accepted and effective form of treatment. In 1953 a new wing was constructed at The Children's Hospital for housing several clinic activities including the Audiology and Speech Pathology Department. In that year – the first of the Scottish Rite Foundation of Colorado – the Foundation made a $1,000 capital construction gift for a group therapy room in this new wing. The room was named the “Scottish Rite Group Therapy Room.”

Today, Children's Department of Audiology, Speech Pathology, and Learning Services averages 30,000 outpatient visits per year. Impressively, this is just slightly less than 10 percent of total hospital outpatient visits – a workload measure which indicates the significance of the department's activities in the context of total hospital outpatient services. With respect to group therapy, approximately 6,000 outpatient visits or 20 percent of the department's annual outpatient visits utilizes the department's group therapy room.

At the Fitzsimons campus the new hospital will be a state-of-the-art facility, the first completely new children's hospital in the United States to be constructed from the ground up in over 30 years. The anticipated opening date is October 2007. The new hospital's design and construction conforms with current models of child health care service. For example, it will provide 270 private rooms for housing in-patient children with in-room overnight accommodations for a parent to stay with his/her child. Another impressive model of service is the physical separation of administrative work space from child care work space. The Audiology, Speech Pathology, and Learning Services Department follows this model as administrative offices will be located in an office building adjacent to the hospital.

The group therapy room at Fitzsimons will include a group therapy area, kitchen area with tiny counter tops, and an observation room. The total area of the room is about 400 square feet. It will be titled the “Colorado Masons – Scottish Rite Foundation Group Therapy Room” in return for a $150,000 capital construction gift.

There are several compelling reasons for supporting The Children's Hospital new facility. First, our support affirms the strong partnership between the Foundation and Children's with the name of the room being prominently displayed in the clinic over a multi-generational period. The Foundation-approved name for the room enhances the visibility of the Fraternity at the hospital by directly associating the words “Colorado Masons” with the Foundation's name.

Second, this effort associates all Colorado Masons and friends with the most outstanding pediatric hospital in Colorado and the Rocky Mountain Region. In 2006 the U.S. News & World Report ranked The Children's Hospital as seventh out of 250 children's hospitals nationwide. It has been ranked in the top tier of pediatric hospitals for over a decade.

Third, we are now partnering with 11 organizations (see page 10) in 19 communities throughout the state because of the coordination and liaison provided by The Children's Hospital. If not for this, we would probably not be serving Colorado children in as many communities or as effectively and as comprehensively.

Finally, and most importantly, this is “For a Child's Sake.”

How to Participate in the Fundraising Campaign for the Group Therapy Room

For pledges and gifts, you may use the gift form on page 11. Donors making a $500 or more contribution will have their name inscribed on a Roll of Honor to be installed in each Consistory and at The Children's Hospital. For gifts of $1,000-$2,499, donors will receive an engraved certificate of appreciation co-signed by Illustrious Stephen M. Munsinger, 33°, and Dr. Deborah Hayes, the Kelley Family/Schlessman Family Scottish Rite Masons Chair in Childhood Language Disorders. For gifts of $2,500-$4,999, donors will receive a specially minted eagle-engraved bronze plate. For gifts of $5,000 or more, donors will be invited to a reception at the new clinic and have an official signed and framed photograph taken with the SGIG & the Chair.

Funds raised that exceed $150,000 will be deposited in the fund for the Dwight A. Hamilton Scottish Rite Foundation of Colorado Graduate Scholarship in Speech-Language Pathology.

“To Give These Kids A Voice”
by MW Thomas J. Cox, 32°
Grand Master of Masons in Colorado and member of the Montrose Appraisal Committee

What does the world see when they see us? I would like to think they see messengers of Faith, Hope and Charity.

Faith - the world at large will know that Masons come together from all creeds, to work for a better world through our faith in the Fatherhood of God.

Hope - that through these ordinary people from kids in a HIKE choir, the silent messenger holding a child, or the quiet work of a blue lodge in its community, this Masonic family holds hope for all who are in need.

Charity - this is the greatest tenet of all. It is an obligation as a Mason, but as such it has never been based on race, religion, wealth or social standing. It is not about being glorified by how much you gave, but by doing what you can at the time. To give these kids a voice and be able to hear their words - I cannot imagine a greater reward.

Masonry has never been a secret, as some would say; but with this great project we have the opportunity to come together in public as the Masonic Family and show the people of Colorado that Freemasonry is the embodiment of Faith, Hope and Charity. The “Colorado Masons - Scottish Rite Foundation Group Therapy Room” will be a place where every child will be treated equally - and loved unconditionally.

“The Largest Donor!”
by Dori Biester, RN, Ph.D.
President and CEO
The Children’s Hospital

The Scottish Rite Masons remain the largest donor to The Children’s Hospital, and we cannot adequately thank you for your long history of generous support. Your partnership makes it possible for Children’s Department of Audiology, Speech Pathology and Learning

Services to serve hundreds of children with language disorders, while at the same time garnering national recognition for its work.

The newly named Bill Daniels Center for Children's Hearing will house our programs for deaf and hard-of-hearing children, many of whom benefit from services supported by the Scottish Rite Foundation.

We truly appreciate that you are working on yet another gift to Children's to support the Group Therapy Room in the new outpatient clinic, and we will be honored to recognize your gift in this space.

Our Partnership With One of the Nation's Best Children's Hospitals

In 2006 The Children's Hospital was ranked by U.S. News & World Report as seventh out of 250 children's hospitals in the United States. In fact, it has been ranked as one of the best pediatric hospitals for more than a decade.

With 1,100 pediatric specialists, 2,400 full-time employees, and more than 1,900 volunteers, Children's is home to a number of nationally and internationally recognized medical programs. It is at the forefront of research into childhood disease and receives more than $30 million each year for research. Its various in-patient and outpatient services provide health care for thousands of children each year. It has in-patient admissions of about 10,000 children each year.

Of special note for Colorado, The Children's Hospital and Memorial Health System in Colorado Springs recently announced the formation of a partnership. They will jointly manage the new Memorial Hospital for Children in a shared effort to provide world-class neonatal and pediatric services to children in Colorado Springs and southern Colorado.

The new entity will replace Memorial's existing Colorado Springs Children's Hospital at Memorial Hospital (also a RiteCare Clinic partner). This partnership will enhance opportunities for additional research, clinical trial participation, and constructive information exchanges to benefit children of southern Colorado. This seamless collaboration will enhance the timeliness of information, patient transfers, and medical consults for children, particularly those chronically ill children who require specialized services.

Through 2005 The Children's Hospital has provided speech therapy for an estimated 8,800 children with Foundation-provided financial assistance. Over this period the Foundation has given The Children's Hospital about $18 million in support of speech pathology, learning services, and associated speech-language programs. The grants made to Children's ranks the Foundation as the largest and most significant single donor in the hospital's 98-year history.

In February 2003 the Foundation established an endowed chair at Children's with a gift of $2 million. The Chair, held by Dr. Deborah Hayes, is known as the Kelley Family/Schlessman Family Scottish Rite Masons Chair in Childhood Language Disorders. With this Chair, the partnership between the Foundation and Children's advanced to a new level.

The Chair makes it possible for an on-going coordination and liaison function with all Foundation partners. Dr. Hayes works with the Foundation on long range strategic planning, expanding speech therapy services in Colorado.

Of special significance, she oversaw the design and implementation of a system to review and evaluate, on a on-going basis, the effectiveness of speech therapy at the partner clinics in Colorado. Consequently, outcome measurements are now available in assessing a child's progress in our partner clinics.

2006 Scholarship Recipients

In 2005 the Scottish Rite Foundation of Colorado awarded its first scholarships to graduate students in speech pathology. The scholarship program was instituted to encourage well qualified individuals to enter this career field which has many vacancies in Colorado and throughout the Nation. Rural Colorado is especially in need of speech pathologists, as well as some of the larger communities such as Grand Junction and Pueblo which have experienced difficulties in attracting individuals to work in their communities. The Foundation's scholarship is named for our former Foundation president and Sovereign Grand Inspector General, Dwight A. Hamilton, 33°. It is known as the "Dwight A. Hamilton Scottish Rite Foundation of Colorado Graduate Scholarship in Speech-Language Pathology."

In addition to the Hamilton scholarship, the Colorado Masons' Benevolent Fund Association has partnered with the Foundation, beginning in 2002, by awarding two graduate scholarships in speech pathology each year.

Each scholarship recipient is presented a one-time $5,000 scholarship award. The 2006 scholarship recipients are awarded to students at the University of Northern Colorado and the University of Colorado as follows:

Hamilton Scholarship:

Amy M. Mulligan – CU
Laura M. Wilson – CU

Colorado Masons' Scholarship:

Kristine D. Leedy – UNC
Rachel K. Moore – UNC

The scholarship recipients will be honored at Denver Consistory's stated meeting on September 18, 2006, with special scholarship certificates to be presented.

What are Speech and Language Disorders?

Speech and language disorders refer to problems in communication and related areas such as oral motor function. They include problems with hearing, speaking, or understanding spoken or written language. They range from simple sound substitutions to the inability to understand or use language or use the oral-motor mechanism for functional speech and feeding.

Speech disorders refer to difficulties producing speech sounds or problems with voice quality. Speech disorders might be characterized by an interruption in the flow or rhythm of speech, such as stuttering. They may be problems with the way sounds are formed. Or, they may be difficulties with pitch, volume or quality of the voice. There may be a combination of several problems. Children with speech disorders may have trouble using some speech sounds, which can also be a symptom of a delay. They may say "see" when they mean "ski" or they may have trouble using other sounds like "l" or "r." Listeners may have trouble understanding what someone with a speech disorder is trying to say. People with voice disorders may have trouble with the way their voices sound.

Language disorders refer to the ability to understand and/or use words in context, both verbally and nonverbally. Some characteristics of language disorders include improper use of words and their meanings, inability to express ideas, inappropriate grammatical patterns, reduced vocabulary and inability to follow directions. One or a combination of these characteristics may occur in children who are affected by language learning disabilities or developmental language delay. Children may hear or see a word but not be able to understand its meaning. They may have trouble getting others to understand what they are trying to communicate.

While the cause of speech and language disorders in many cases is unknown, in other cases it is known. Some causes are present at birth while others are acquired. Examples of congenital (before or during birth) conditions include hearing loss, cerebral palsy, and cleft lip or palate. Examples of acquired (postnatal) conditions include head injury, infections affecting the brain, and malnutrition.

Examples of speech and language disorders include:

√ Developmental expressive language disorder (also referred to as developmental expressive aphasia) – This disorder describes children who fail to develop the use of speech at the usual age. These children have normal intelligence, normal hearing, good emotional relationships and normal articulation skills. The primary deficit appears to be a brain dysfunction that results in an inability to translate ideas into speech. Intervention is required as this disorder is not self-correcting. A child with this disorder is at risk for language-based learning disabilities such as dyslexia.

√ Receptive language disorder (frequently referred to as receptive aphasia) – A primary problem with this disorder is a deficit in the comprehension of spoken language. Production difficulties and speech delay stem from this disability. Children show normal responses to nonverbal auditory stimuli. Their parents often describe them as “not listening” rather than “not hearing.” The speech of these children is not only delayed but also sparse, agrammatic and indistinct in articulation. On their own and without intervention, children with receptive aphasia gradually acquire a language of their own, understood only by those who are familiar with them.

√ Autism spectrum disorder – ASD is a neurologically based developmental disorder whose onset occurs before the child reaches the age of 36 months. It is characterized by delayed and deviant language development, failure to develop the ability to relate to others, and ritualistic and compulsive behaviors, including stereotyped repetitive motor activity. ASD is 3-4 times more common in boys than in girls.

Scottish Rite Commitment to Addressing the Single Biggest Child Health Problem

The single biggest health problem for children is associated with speech and language impairments.

Martha Drake, RiteCare Director in Pueblo

In 2003 then Scottish Rite Sovereign Grand Commander C. Fred Kleinknecht, 33°, stated, “Childhood [speech and] language disorders strike more children than all other childhood problems combined – more than the total of birth defects, orthopedic problems, serious illnesses, and everything else added together.”

It is estimated that communication disorders (including speech, language, and hearing disorders) affect one of every 10 people in the United States. The American Academy of Family Physicians states that speech delay is a common childhood problem that affects 3 to 10 percent of children and is three to four times more common in boys than in girls.

More than one million students in the Nation’s public schools have speech or language impairment. And, this does not include children who have speech or language problems secondary to other conditions such as deafness. Appropriate timely intervention is crucial especially because all communication disorders carry the potential to isolate individuals from their social and educational surroundings.

In 1953 the Scottish Rite Foundation of Colorado was created by Denver’s Scottish Rite Masons for the purpose of sponsoring the treatment of childhood speech and language disorders. The first of its kind to be organized by the Masonic Fraternity, this Foundation in partnership with The Children’s Hospital was an early proponent and encourager of the treatment of preschool-age children. However, it wasn’t until two decades later that treatment for these children would be embraced as national policy with the passage by Congress in 1975 of The Education of the Handicapped Act (Public Law 94-142).

Scottish Rite Masons rightfully take pride in being the second largest provider of speech and language disorders services for children, second only to the Nation’s public school systems. In Colorado about 1,000 children receive therapy each year with Scottish Rite Foundation financial assistance. Nationally, Scottish Rite programs in all states provide assistance to about 25,000 children annually.

With what we now refer to as the RiteCare Childhood Language Program, our Scottish Rite forefathers’ vision is as real today as it was at the Foundation’s birth over a half-century ago. We continue to work towards giving the opportunity for treatment to every child with speech and/or language disorders. By focusing on this vision we answer the call to service and recognize that we are, as Sovereign Grand Commander Ronald A. Seale, 33°, encourages us to be, “Trustees of the Past and Architects of the Future.”
